

WE REQUIRE DOCTOR

Action, Research, and Training for Health (ARTH), a not-for-profit organization based at Udaipur, has been working with rural-tribal communities in southern Rajasthan since 1997. ARTH's mission is to help communities access and manage health care according to their needs and capacity, by using research and training initiatives. ARTH provides health services at three self-owned and operated health centers and a small hospital, alongside a large community programme. Its health facilities have resident nurse-midwives and visiting doctors who provide a range of RCH and general health services. For other details of ARTH and its journey till date, refer to website www.arth.in

ARTH proposes to recruit one full time residential doctor to expand the scale and scope of its clinical services. The doctor's responsibilities will be as follows:

1. Provide outpatient clinical services to clients coming to the ARTH clinics. The clinical services will comprise reproductive and child health services, general health problems, problems of the elderly and of persons with mental health conditions
2. Attend to minor emergencies, provide first aid and assist in referral of a major emergencies on call basis
3. Train other health staff in clinical work so that work is done as per protocols and rational treatment guidelines
4. Attend camps held periodically for specific ailments and perform roles assigned by the Chief Executive

This is a full time position that offers an opportunity to be part of an interesting learning experience with a range of clinical services being provided at primary level of care in a rural context. The position offers the chance to undergo training on reproductive and child health, mental health and elder care, to learn new skills, to conduct research and publish in scientific journals. The work environment is stimulating and the candidate will be ably supported by a large facility and community team.
